Collier Marsh focuses his practice in the areas of construction, land use, state and local property tax, and commercial litigation. His clients include real estate developers, commercial property owners, homebuilders, homeowners associations, and manufacturers. He represents his clients through numerous stages of construction and development, from the initial zoning and entitlement to the ultimate resolution of disputes.

In his land use and property tax practices, Collier represents his clients before state and local boards and commissions throughout North Carolina. He also litigates on behalf of his clients in the Superior Courts of North Carolina, the federal district courts of North Carolina, the North Carolina Court of Appeals, and the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals. Collier has also represented clients before the North Carolina Industrial Commission and the American Arbitration Association.

Prior to joining Parker Poe, Collier served as a law clerk for the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Kentucky and the Office of the Attorney General of Kentucky.

While at the University of Kentucky College of Law, Collier served as the editor-in-chief of the Kentucky Journal of Equine, Agriculture, and Natural Resources Law and was a member of the Trial Advocacy Board. He also worked at the University of Kentucky Legal Clinic, where he provided pro bono legal services for the local community.
