Morgan Fey is the director of talent acquisition at Parker Poe. In this strategic leadership role, Morgan drives recruitment efforts related to the firm's greatest asset – its people. Working with firm leadership, she manages the strategic conception, integration, and execution of the firm's growth and recruitment initiatives. Morgan oversees all aspects of the firm's recruiting efforts, from entry-level associates to partners.

Before joining Parker Poe, Morgan practiced as a litigator with an international law firm. Her practice focused on complex financial services litigation in the areas of home mortgage foreclosures, default, servicing, and loss mitigation. Morgan also has experience with complex commercial litigation, including professional negligence defense, risk management, and product liability.

Morgan received her bachelor's degree from the University of Western Ontario and her law degree from New England Law in Boston. While in law school, she was the managing business editor of the New England Journal on Criminal and Civil Confinement (NEJCCC).
