Laura Goode is a real estate attorney who focuses on telecommunications matters and commercial real estate transactions.

Prior to joining Parker Poe, she practiced with a Southeastern law firm, managing all aspects of obtaining zoning permits in jurisdictions across North Carolina. She has a thorough understanding of how land use and zoning law impacts the telecommunications industry in particular.

Additionally, Laura is a former associate attorney general for the North Carolina Department of Justice. She gained extensive experience in civil litigation through that role.

While earning her law degree at Campbell University, Laura interned at the N.C. Department of Justice and the Wake County District Attorney's Office. She was also a member of the asylum law moot court team for two years.
